

Work Experience

Image: David Newton

There is a useful website to check out that deals with the many issues that arise out of work placements. Although it is general in nature, the website is undoubtedly the best for graduate placements, tackling the fundamental problems of sorting out a suitable placement and dealing with some of the myths that surround the practice.

There are top tips and lists of contacts and books, such as one about gaining work experience in the TV industry from Skillset.

Prospects

www.prospects.ac.uk/workexperience

Much of the information is also available in booklet form – Work Experience 2008/9 – available through the careers adviser or the college careers library.

Also check out the site for the National Council for Work Experience. Plenty of information for both employers and students, including case studies (check out Lucy Potter for creative industry placement)

Work Experience

www.work-experience.org